About Murchison Falls

Murchison falls is located in the Murchison national park, Albertine rift valley in Northern Uganda East Africa. These falls are as a result of the Victoria Nile (part of River Nile which is the longest river in the whole world) falling over the western rift valley escarpment with its source in Uganda and pouring into the Mediterranean Sea in Egypt, Northern Africa.

History

Formally locally known as the Kabalega falls, An English traveller named Sir Samuel White Baker visited the falls in the mid-1860s and named it after Sir Roderick Impey Murchison who was a Scottish geologist and served as the director general of the British geological survey from 1855 until his death in 1871.
